

They that Observe Lying Vanities

by Jeremy James

The pace of change on the world stage is now so rapid that the average person has difficulty keeping up with it. We could sit down every day and spend hours going through the news, both mainstream and ‘alternative’, and still not get a clear fix on where it’s all heading. Let’s take one simple example: The Line.

Saudi Arabia has announced its plan to build a city in the form of a straight line stretching for 105 miles through the Arabian wilderness. It is described as a “belt of hyper-connected future communities” without cars or roads, with minimal impact on the surrounding environment. This car-free, zero-carbon zone will ultimately house nine million residents. The city will be only 656 feet wide, but 1640 feet tall. The only means of motorized transport will be a high-speed train which will transit from one end of the linear metropolis to the other in just 20 minutes.

The outer walls of the city will be covered with mirror-type panels to reflect the intense desert heat:

We are struck by the astonishingly ambitious nature of this project as well as its seemingly benevolent purpose. The Crown Prince, it appears, is investing a vast sum in the future welfare of his people. This is not something the Arabian royals have ever done!

In reality, this is a New World Order project, where each member of the population will be confined to a designated zone and unable to travel outside of it. The Line will likely permit residents to walk no more than three miles from their assigned living quarters. The high-speed train will only be used for commercial purposes and by privileged individuals with electronic clearance. Every movement, night or day, will be monitored, and anyone behaving in a suspicious manner – as determined by AI algorithms – will be removed and re-educated, or simply terminated.

The Elite envisage a future where a severely culled population will be confined to similar zones of habitation. The Line is likely one of several architectural designs under consideration, depending on geographical and climatic conditions. Those who escape will have nowhere to go and will be easy to track down. Surveillance drones will detect signals from an escapee's body implants and robotic dogs will finish the job:

Most people who have seen a video of these mechanical gun-dogs may regard them as, at worst, a deterrent for prisoners who might be planning to break out of a high-security facility. In other words, they believe they are designed to protect innocent people! For those who still think their government ‘cares’ for them, this kind of self-delusion is understandable, but when we consider the futuristic cities that the Elite are planning for everyone, these robotic killing machines will have a very specific, very macabre, purpose: “Don’t step over The Line!”

The principal message

The principal message that mankind needs to understand at this time is that the governments of the world are working together to enslave their populations in a technocratic system of control. The plan was formally agreed by over one hundred world leaders at the so-called ‘Earth Summit’ in Rio de Janeiro in 1992.

Cynics may object – “But where is this alleged plan? Show it to us and we’ll believe you!”

Group photo of world leaders meeting at the 'Earth Summit' in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, 13 June 1992

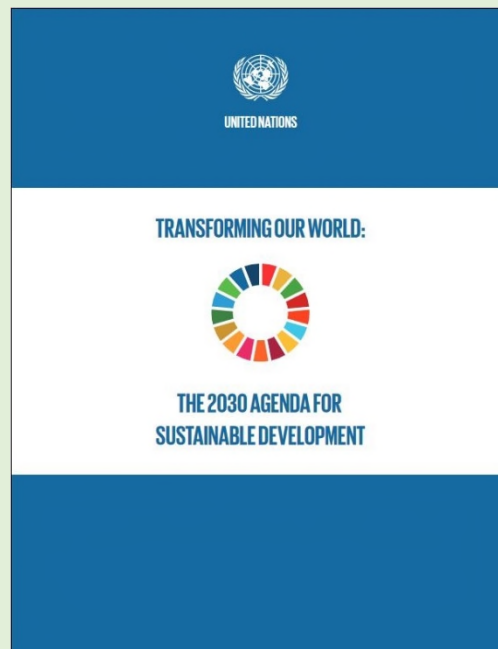

Well, here it is:

The pdf, which comprises 350 pages, may be found at <https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/content/documents/Agenda21.pdf>

“Agenda 21 is a non-binding action plan of the United Nations with regard to sustainable development. It is a product of the Earth Summit (UN Conference on Environment and Development) held in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, in 1992. It is an action agenda for the UN, other multilateral organizations, and individual governments around the world that can be executed at local, national, and global levels.” - Wikipedia

If that does not satisfy the critics, perhaps on the grounds that Agenda 21 was agreed thirty years ago and we are still not enslaved by a totalitarian technocracy, let them peruse the following:

The pdf (41 pages) may be found at:

<https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/post2015/transformingourworld/publication>

Known as Agenda 2030, This was agreed by virtually all UN members (over 190 countries) in 2015.

The two documents together, along with related UN reports intended to facilitate the implementation of the goals set out in Agenda 21 / Agenda 2030, constitute a comprehensive plan to secure complete control over ALL of the world's resources by 2030.

So, if the Dutch farmers are wondering why their government wants to take their farms from them, they should consult these documents! It's all there. Equally, Irish farmers, who are being forced by the government to cull their cattle in order to reduce the size of the national herd, should consult these documents. The representative body of German pensioners, who will incur colossal heating bills this winter and who may be forced to relocate to government 'warming centers', should study these nefarious documents. So, too, should all the companies and organizations that are being hit with carbon taxes, restrictions on the use of fuel, and many other 'green' regulations and targets.

To date the public has not noticed how their respective governments have betrayed them because (a) they have never studied the documents, (b) the media have never reported on them, (c) the documents are written in coy and misleading language, and (d) the average person never expected the government – which they elected! – to deceive them in this way.

Did you notice how quickly every country on earth (with only a few exceptions) agreed to lockdown their economies in March 2020? This, too, was part of the UN plan, where countries agreed in advance to adopt whatever measures the UN might impose. In a sense, the 2020 lockdown was decided at Rio in 1992. Similar mandates affecting all nations will be carried through over the next few years, without public debate, political dissent, or lawful civil resistance.

The theft of private property by the state

Take the case of Ireland. The country is being subjected to wave after wave of uncontrolled immigration. The government in the meantime bleats about the need to house all of these people. The public is made to believe they are morally obliged to do what they can to alleviate the suffering of others, to provide houses, schools, healthcare, and much else besides. The cost is astronomical, but since the media never adverts to the harm that this is doing to our country, the public foolishly chooses to believe that everything will work out fine. Hardly one person in a hundred can see that our country is being run by Communists and that they are operating in accordance with a UN-approved Communist agenda.

So, when the government recently announced that they were planning to requisition 'holiday homes' owned by Irish residents in order to accommodate the ever-increasing hoard of welfare-immigrants, the public was not inclined to demur. After all, if a real social need exists, they believe, it is only reasonable to consider all of the options. The "option" chosen by the government just happened to be the one preferred by all Communist regimes, namely, take what belongs to someone else.

The state-approved theft of private property is a core principle of Communism. It is being used against Dutch farmers and Irish owners of a second home, and it will be used in the most flagrant ways in the years ahead, both in Europe and in other parts of the world, to impose radical social change.

Illegal

Legal

The threat of expropriation

The threat of expropriation will be used both to impoverish the masses and to silence dissent. Those who dare to speak out and challenge local or national authorities risk becoming a target of state-sponsored theft. Until recently it was possible to sue the authorities in the courts for abusing their powers, but this is no longer the case. No intending litigant, subject to coercion and bullying by the state, can safely initiate an action against their oppressor via the existing judicial system. The percentage of lawyers and judges who are corrupt or compromised is simply too great, while the legal costs of even a modest action are beyond the means of the average victim.

Consider the following case. The Department of Finance has estimated that the annual cost of housing Ukrainian refugees in Ireland is €2.5 billion. This amounts to €25,000 per person. Meanwhile, an Irish employer, a fisherman with a family who maintains a crew of two and who provides a steady supply of food for local consumption, has been hit with a bill for €30,000 by the local harbor authority. Why? For several years he has protested against their failure to honor legally binding commitments made to local fishermen. This made him a 'target'. The harbor authority simply decided to conjure up a mythical bill and leave him to deal with the frightful financial implications of what they were doing to him.

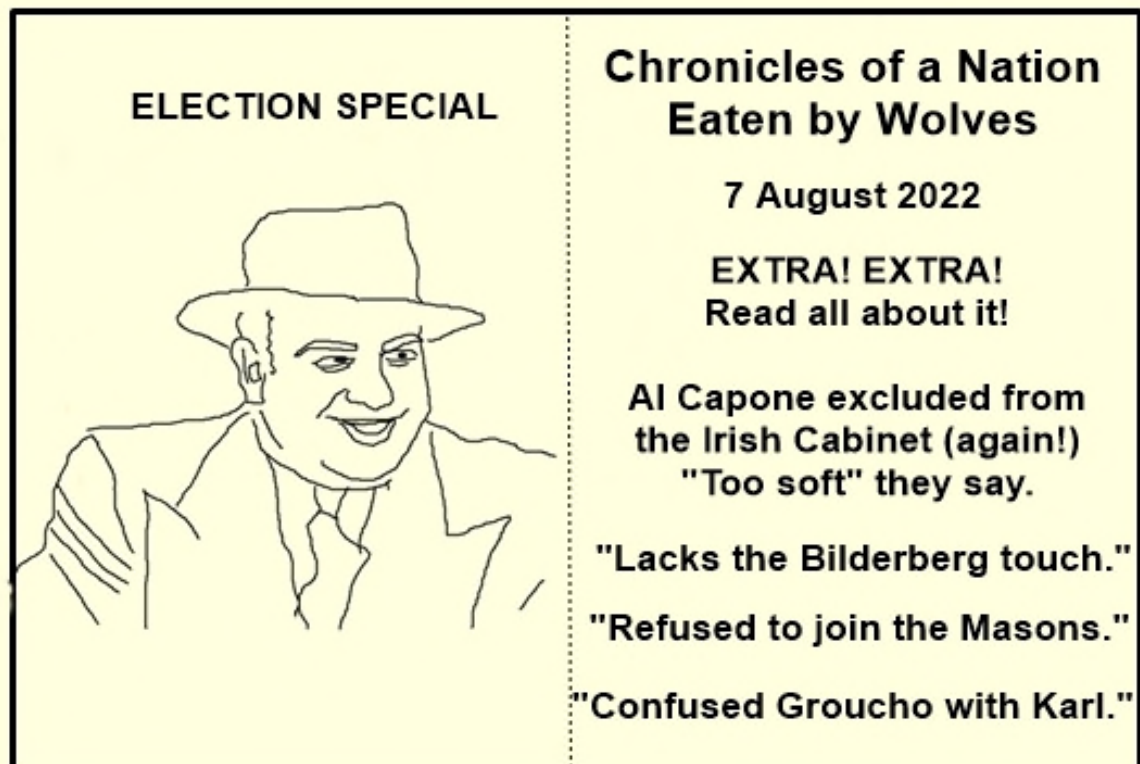

Had he been a Ukrainian refugee, the Irish government was prepared to furnish him with services worth €25,000 per annum, but as he is an Irish worker, providing both employment and a valuable service to his community, he is treated like a pariah. He is expected to hand over €30,000 of his hard-earned money in response to extortionate threats! This is how Marxism works.

The Department of the Marine is responsible for ensuring that the harbor authorities across Ireland act within the law. Those who fail to do so can lose their license. But we greatly doubt whether that will happen in this case because Irish government agencies, including government departments, can no longer be trusted to operate under the rule of law. Immune from prosecution, the Marxists play by their own rules, and honest men and women are made to pay the price.

Tens of thousands of people know about this and similar cases, but they say nothing. It doesn't affect them personally and the gross abuse of power leaves their hearts untouched. The crimes themselves are troubling, but the collective silence is even more unsettling. It points to a society which no longer wants to protect itself against the Enemy, a society which is no longer able to tell the stark difference between right and wrong, a society whose members are content to live with "lying vanities" provided the harshness they entail leaves them untouched.

In the remainder of this paper we offer a series a satirical cartoons about the many and varied lies that the public is being told today through the media, politics and science.

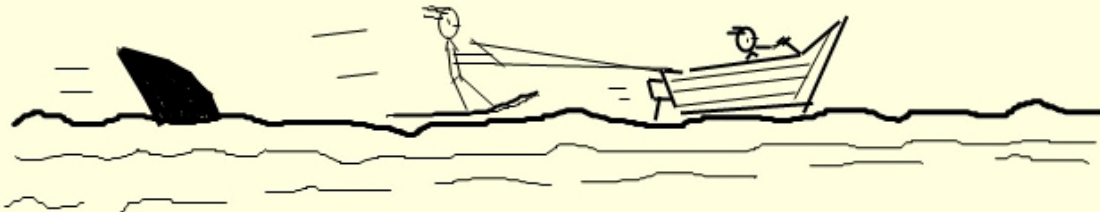

We usually think of lies as something the victim would find repulsive if he found out about them, but there are many lies which our society has little interest in exposing. We might think of them as lies of convenience, lies which relieve us of the duty to act responsibly at all times and live in accordance with God's laws.
